FIRST STORY OF TONOPAH

pecting for its source. The nature of the formation is soft; consequently erosion has been very great, but the quartz, being extremely hard, has resisted the action of the elements and, so far as the ledges are concerned, oxidation has not been radical, hence the veins crop immediately above the country rock. The cropings were of such magnitude and the surface quartz of such peculiar cast that he was not favorably prepossessed with the general outlook, but concluded, however, to take a few samples and have them tested. These samples were sent to T. L. Oddie, of Belmont, and by whom they were forwarded to Walter Gayhart at Austin for treatment. The returns were promptly received by Mr. Oddie, but it was several weeks before he met Mr. Butler and apprised him of their value. The results exceeded by far his fondest expectations and created great excitement among those who were made aware of the richness of the ore. These tests gave a return of 540 ounces in silver and $206 in gold. Fabulous though these values were, Mr. Butler was still unenthusiastic and desired other corroborative evidence and, through the instrumentality of Wilkes Brougher, the samples were sent to Frank Higgs, at Klondike, for him to test, but had been misplaced and forgotten, were traced up and yielded 395 ounces in silver and $152 in gold.

Acted With Deliberation

Knowing that it would require money to perform the requisite amount of labor under the state law and also for recording, he debated the feasibility of the proposition for some time before he assured himself that the undertaking was possible. At this time he was holding an office in Nye county and his duties in this respect, coupled with the attention he was compelled to pay to his ranch, he did not return to the field of his discovery until August. Mrs. Butler accompanied her husband on this trip and under her persuasion and influenced by extraordinary assays Mr. Butler took much deeper interest in the matter and immediately commenced the work of locating.

Locating Desert Queen

The Desert Queen was the first location made and recorded in J. L. Butler's name. Mrs. Butler located the Mizpah, one of the richest properties in the group, so far at least as development has progressed. The Buckboard was the next location made in R. C. Chrysler's name, to be followed by the Red Plume and Sand Grass by J. L. Butler. All these locations were made on the first day, all being in close proximity, and the identity of the ledges easily discovered.

Valley View Located

The next day Mrs. Butler found the mammoth cropings of the Valley View appearing from five to seven feet above the surface and about thirty feet in width. At a casual glance they concluded it was of no great value, but upon breaking the ore and finding it strikingly similar to the same ore from which great value had been returned, it was accordingly staked off, and subsequent work demonstrated it to be one of the most important, with the exception of the Mizpah, in the entire group. The ground was carefully searched for the presence of other veins, but becoming satisfied that the locations made embraced the entire cropings of the mineral zone Mr. and Mrs. Butler departed for Belmont, taking seventy-five samples from the different ledges with them for treatment.

Decides on Leasing

No further action was taken until October 8, 1900, when Mr. Butler, accompanied by W. Brougher and T. L. Oddie, both of Belmont, returned to the field and commenced the extraction of ore. News of the great strike spread rapidly and prospectors and miners, ever alert for new fields in which to ply their vocations, soon sought the new Eldorado, and Mr. Butler and those interested with him, concluding the work they would be compelled to perform was greater than they could carry out at that time, conceived the idea of leasing the ledges in parcels of 100 feet along the veins, and by so doing not only get the various locations prospected but obtain substantial financial benefits also. This was a judicious move for all concerned, as it gave ready and lucrative employment to those coming to the camp in search of opportunities and also lessened the burdens that would naturally have fallen upon the mine owners. The steady stream of phenomenally high grade ore that is and has been leaving Tonopah for reduction demonstrates more conclusively than any language could depict how faithfully the leasers have performed their task and is also an indisputable affirmation of the extraordinary values that follow the ledges.

The mines as they now stand are owned jointly by J. L. Butler, W. Brougher, T. L. Oddie, W. C. Gayhart and B. F. Higgs. Mr. Butler represents five parts and the remainder three.

SALE OF FRISCO RAILROAD TO CLOSE UP THE RECEIVERSHIP

(By Associated Press.)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 19.—The sale of the St. Louis and San Francisco railway, which took place at the railroad's round house in St. Louis today, brings within sight the end of the three year receivership, during which the system has been divested of two important subsidiaries—the Chicago and Eastern Illinois and the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico.

The sale at foreclosure was decreed in the United States circuit court by Judge Sanborn on March 31, 1916, and he fixed the minimum price at $45,700,000. The price paid was $45,700,200.

There was one bidder for the property—the reorganization managers—who submitted to the Missouri Public Service commission a comprehensive plan for the financing of the road. The plan was accepted by the commission, except that feature providing for a voting trust to hold the stock of the road for five years.

DEATH OF MRS. ALONZO TRIPP WELL KNOWN IN TONOPAH

Mrs. Alonzo Tripp, a former resident of Tonopah, died at the residence of her son, H. A. Tripp, Atlanta, Ga., last Monday morning of an intestinal disorder. The death was sudden and the family was prostrated by the shock, as the lady, although an invalid since last March, showed no signs of increasing weakness.

Death occurred at the home of her son, Herbert, where Mr. and Mrs. Tripp always spent their winters. Since leaving Tonopah the couple spent their summers with their daughter, Mrs. King, at Kennelbunkport, Me., and the remainder of the year in the south. Jack Tripp spent the last winter with his parents, but is now in San Francisco. Deceased is well and kindly remembered here for her genial disposition and warm in the social and religious life of hospitality, which figured prominently in Tonopah.

AMUSEMENTS

BUTLER THEATER

The feature on the screen at the Butler this evening will be House Peters in the five reel production, "The Hand of Peril." It is a thrilling detective story from the scenario by Arthur Stringer, the noted author of tales of crime detection. Readers of Mr. Stringer's recent stories have been thrilled by the exploits of one James Kestner, government secret agent, in his adventurous exploits in running down malefactors of all kinds. The hero of these remarkable tales is the central character in "The Hand of Peril," and throughout the five reels of stirring action he towers supreme above all other detective characters yet seen on the screen. House Peters is one of the most celebrated actors on the screen and will be remembered being seen here the last time in "The Great Divide." The picture is a combination of a brilliant author, a noted picture star and master director. Napoleon and Sally, the educated chimps, will also be seen in an animal comedy, which are features in themselves and enjoyed by everyone.

Tomorrow, Lenore Ulrich, of "Bird of Paradise" fame, in "The Heart of Paula," a love story of old Mexico.
